The comic panel was a parody of Japanese Folktale called "Momotaro" which is literally means a peach boy. In the first part of the folktale a giant peach came flowing by from the upstream when there was a old lady washing her clothes at the river. When she brought the peach to her home, a little boy was born from the peach, and the old couple named the boy Momotaro and brought him up. After growing up, Momotaro defeats the demons cooperating with the retainers and went home to his old parents with many treasures.
